Evolved Developmental Niche-History
For age 18 and older
(Darcia Narvaez, dnarvaez@nd.edu)

Note to researchers: This questionnaire involves questions that refer to the Evolved Developmental Niche (EDN), the parenting practices that evolved to match up with the maturational schedule of the young child (Hewlett & Lamb, 2005; Konner, 2010; Narvaez, Panksepp et al., 2013).

There is evidence that the EDN influences child wellbeing and morality (Narvaez, Gleason et al., 2013; Narvaez, Wang et al., 2013). But the type of care a baby receives and the caregiver-child relational pattern is often carried forward through the rest of childhood. So although the adult participant is asked to think of all of childhood, we think that these also reflect the early experience in which the brain/body neurobiology is co-constructed by the caregiver.

Our data with adults and college students (n=607) show that scores on this measure (EDN-H) is related to mental and physical health as well as to moral orientation (higher EDN relates to compassionate morality and its precursors; lower EDN relates to self-protective morality and its precursors) (Narvaez, Wang, Lawrence, & Cheng, forthcoming, 2016).
