

office 410 Decio
telephone 1-6434
email Ruccio.1@nd.edu
office hours Thursdays, 11 am-1 pm & by appointment
internet www.nd.edu/~druccio/TPE-FO8.html

This course is a follow-up to Introduction to Political Economy, the initial presentation of nonmainstream economic theories and approaches. The content of Topics in Political Economy varies from semester to semester. This semester, we will read and discuss a series of book-length approaches to political economy. We will also view and discuss some classic films in political economy.

I have chosen four books that are considered to be classics of political economy: Adam Smith's The Wealth of Nations, Karl Marx's Capital, Thorstein Veblen's The Theory of the Leisure Class, and Karl Polanyi's The Great Transformation. They are classics in the sense that no student of economics can consider themselves well-acquainted with or knowledgeable about the field unless and until they have studied these books. I have paired each of these books with four relatively recent books that draw on and further develop the concepts and methods of the classics. They are the following: Deirdre McCloskey's The Bourgeois Virtues, Stephen Resnick and Richard Wolff's Knowledge and Class, Kevin Phillips's Wealth and Democracy, and Naomi Klein's The Shock Doctrine. At the end of reading and discussing these eight books, students will have acquired an in-depth understanding of some of the key ideas that, historically and today, define and inspire debates within economics from the perspective of political economy.

Another way of learning about political economy is to view films that take up, represent, and extend the ideas of political economy. I have chosen five films that, once again, are considered to be (or are on their way to becoming) classics in the field: Charlie Chaplin's Modern Times, Barbara Kopple's Harlan County, U.S.A., Michael Moore's Roger & Me, Richard Linklater's Fast Food Nation, and Stephanie Black's Life and Debt.

Organization. The course will be conducted as a combination of lecture and seminar. Therefore, it is important for all students to complete the assigned readings before each session and to participate in the classroom discussions.

Grading. There will be no examinations in this course. Instead, students will prepare weekly papers, each approximately 450-500 words, due each Tuesday in class. The purpose of the papers is to "grapple" with the readings—to formulate the main themes, to raise the interesting issues, to pose the key questions—in preparation for the classroom discussions. I will be looking for serious, thoughtful, and well-written critical engagements with the readings. The other assignment is an essay, 8 to 10 pages, on a recent book or film in political economy. Students should choose a book or film from the Political Economy Reading & Viewing List, and then write a critical essay that addresses the key issues raised by the author or director and relates the author's or director's treatment of those issues to the readings, lectures, films, and discussions in the course. Students should feel free to contact me—in person, by office telephone, or by email—to discuss their choices, ways of addressing the book's or film's main themes, and other possible references. You need to choose the book or film by 6 November. The essay itself is due by 5 pm on Wednesday, 17 December.

Political Economy: An Overview

[26 August]

Film: Charlie Chaplin, Modern Times (1936)

[Wednesday, 3 September]

Weeks 2-4: Smith and McCloskey

[2, 4, 9, 11, 16 & 18 September]

Adam Smith, The Wealth of Nations, intro. A. B. Krueger (New York: Bantam Dell, 2003 [1776])—you may choose to omit Book 1, “Digression on Silver” (pp. 241-328); Book 2, chapter 2, on Scottish banking practices (pp. 378-408) as well as chapters 4 and 5 (pp. 447-77); Book 3, chapters 2 and 3 (pp. 488-518); Book 4, chapters 2-6 (pp. 568-703) and 9 (pp. 842-78); and Appendix (pp. 1209–11); and Book 5, chapter 2, part 1 (pp. 1032-42) and an account of different kinds of taxes (pp. 1045-152) and chapter 3, on Great Britain's public debt (pp. 1159-78)

Deirdre N. McCloskey, The Bourgeois Virtues: Ethics for an Age of Commerce (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2006)—you may choose to omit chapters 35-37 (pp. 379-404)

Film: Barbara Kopple, Harlan County, U.S.A. (1976)

[Wednesday, 17 September]

Weeks 5-7: Marx and Resnick & Wolff

[23, 25 & 30 September and 2, 7 & 9 October]

Karl Marx, Capital, vol. 1, intro. E. Mandel, trans. B. Fowkes (New York: Penguin, 1990 [1867])—you may choose to omit chapters 13-24 (pp. 439-761) and 27-33 (pp. 877-940)

Stephen A. Resnick and Richard D. Wolff, Knowledge and Class: A Marxian Critique of Political Economy (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1987)

Film: Michael Moore, Roger & Me (1989)

[Wednesday, 15 October]

Weeks 8-10: Veblen and Phillips

[14, 16, 28 & 30 October and 4 & 6 November]

Thorstein Veblen, The Theory of the Leisure Class: An Economic Study of Institutions (New York: Oxford University Press, 2008 [1899])

Kevin Phillips, Wealth and Democracy: A Political History of the American Rich (New York: Broadway Books, 2002)

Film: Richard Linklater, Fast Food Nation (2006)

[Wednesday, 12 November]

Weeks 11-13: Polanyi and Klein

[11, 13, 18, 20 & 25 November]

Karl Polanyi, The Great Transformation: The Political and Economic Origins of Our Time, foreword by J. E. Stiglitz, intro. F. Block (Boston: Beacon Press, 2001 [1944])

Naomi Klein, The Shock Doctrine: The Rise of Disaster Capitalism (New York: Metropolitan Books, 2007)

Stephanie Black, Life and Debt (2001)

[Wednesday, 3 December]

Topics in Political Economy: Conclusion

[9 December]