

NDXV

15th Biennial History of Astronomy Workshop

June 8-12, 2022

at the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, and Adler Planetarium

Communicating Astronomy

How is astronomical knowledge and expertise communicated, both within and beyond the astronomical community?

How is knowledge produced and transformed through the ways that information is exchanged between astronomers and their colleagues, or with the public?

How have changes in tools and methods of communication impacted astronomy?

Papers exploring methods and aspects of communicating astronomy in any context, geographical region, or time period are welcome.

Invited Speaker: Charlotte Bigg

Research fellow at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (Centre Alexandre Koyré, Paris)
Co-editor of The Heavens on Earth: Observatories and Astronomy in the Nineteenth Century and the June 2021 special issue of the journal History of Science:
The Spatial Inscription of Science in the 20th Century
