Toward the Endless Day
The Life of Elisabeth Behr-Sigel
Olga Lossky
Translated by Jerry Ryan
Edited by Michael Plekon
Foreword by Olivier Clément
“Olga Lossky...gives us a compelling portrait of this surprising theologian. Simply as a story of a Christian living through the tumultuous 20th century, it is fascinating reading, for Westerners as much as those in the Christian East.” —Books and Culture

White Elephants on Campus
The Decline of the University Chapel in America, 1920–1960
Margaret M. Grubiak
“[A] provocative and engaging look at the university campus chapel in the twentieth century. The author skillfully combines social, educational, religious, and architectural history to illuminate a phenomenon neglected both by scholars and its intended users.” —Peter W. Williams, emeritus, Miami University

The Spice of Popery
Converging Christianities on an Early American Frontier
Laura M. Chmielewski
A Choice Outstanding Academic Title, 2012
“Chmielewski’s book has a great deal to offer. Her discussion of Maine captivity narratives takes us far beyond the better-known world of Mary Rowlandson. . . . [And she] encourages discussion about the ways in which people in the early modern period defined and used religion in their daily lives.” —Journal of Church and State

Catholic Progressives in England after Vatican II
Jay F. Corrin

Third Place, History, 2014 Catholic Press Association Book Award

“It’s a fascinating story. . . . Corrin sets English Catholicism in the context of wider church history, taking us in a racy summary from the aloof authoritarianism of Pope Pius XII through to (in Corrin’s view) the victory of the ‘progressives’ at Vatican II and the subsequent confusions created by the encyclical Humanae Vitae (1968). Corrin then turns to the Slant movement.” —The Tablet

Confessing History
Explorations in Christian Faith and the Historian’s Vocation
Edited by John Feo, Jay Green, and Eric Miller

“Green and his fellow editors are to be commended for building upon the work of the older generation of Reformers and evangelical scholars, who since the 1960s have been asking hard questions about the Christian historian’s vocation in the present age.” —Anglican and Episcopal History

History, Languages, and Cultures of the Spanish and Portuguese Worlds

Juan de Segovia and the Fight for Peace
Christians and Muslims in the Fifteenth Century
Anne Marie Wolf

“Juan de Segovia was one of the four or five most interesting interpreters of Islam in premodern Europe. In this meticulous, beautifully written, and deeply thoughtful book, Anne Marie Wolf presents his complicated views on medieval Christendom’s great rival in the rich detail that they deserve, and gracefully illuminates his insistent search for peaceful modes of Christian-Muslim interaction.” —Thomas E. Burman, University of Tennessee
