A Descriptive Catalogue of the Medieval and Renaissance Manuscripts of the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s College

David T. Gura

David T. Gura’s innovative catalogue describes the 288 medieval and Renaissance manuscripts held by the University of Notre Dame (Hesburgh Library and Snite Museum of Art) and Saint Mary’s College. Bound manuscripts, leaves, and fragments, which span the late eleventh through the sixteenth century and include bibles, books of hours, calendars, liturgical texts, and much more, are given thorough critical treatment and scholarly description.

“David T. Gura’s fastidious and comprehensive treatment of the manuscripts he catalogues ranks among the very best scholarship I have ever encountered. Both the originality and exceptional detail of this catalogue convey its potential to be a model for similar cataloguing endeavors in the future. This is no mere ‘catalogue,’ in other words; on the contrary, it represents the future of manuscript taxonomy, a departure from anything I know of for any American collection of manuscripts.”

Savage Economy
The Returns of Middle English Romance
Walter Wadiak

“With his Savage Economy: The Returns of Middle English Romance, Walter Wadiak delivers a dynamically written and intellectually sparkling study of medieval romance. Treating his materials with deftness, acuity, and theoretical sophistication, he engages the medieval texts with penetrating uses of theory in a way that will stimulate a number of important advances in work on medieval ‘romance’ and ‘ballad’ and, no doubt, medieval literature generally.”

Psellos and the Patriarchs
Letters and Funeral Orations for Keroullarios, Leichoudes, and Xiphilinos
Michael Psellos
Translated by Anthony Kaldellis and Ioannis Polemis

“Learning, philosophy, complex theology, the call of monasticism, high politics, and deep intrigue make up the world of eleventh-century Byzantium. Michael Psellos belonged to this world and wrote about it in an engaging and gossipy way. His funeral orations on three patriarchs of Constantinople, together with some of his letters, shed much light on the detail of this period. The translators, who, by editing these works, rescued them from oblivion, have put the world of scholarship deeply in their debt.”

New Directions in Medieval Manuscript Studies and Reading Practices
Essays in Honor of Derek Pearsall
Edited by Kathryn Kerby-Fulton, John J. Thompson, and Sarah Baechle

“As a tribute to a distinguished scholar, this volume of essays could hardly be finer. Assembled from contributions presented in London at the 2011 conference in honour of the 80th birthday of Derek Pearsall, the range and diversity of subjects covered are as absorbing as the work of the man himself.”

Imitatio Christi
The Poetics of Piety in Early Modern England
Nandra Perry

“(A)n elegantly structured and sensitively researched examination of imitation as a site of cultural conflict in post-Reformation literature. . . . One of the strengths of Perry’s research is the attention she devotes to her contextual sources. Placing equal interpretive weight on martyrlogies, polemical treatises, and devotional handbooks, her study offers fascinating revelations about the interplay between public and private, elite and popular, Catholic, Anglican, and Puritan—eliding traditional critical binaries.”

The Wisdom of Animals
Creatureliness in Early Modern French Spirituality
Catharine Randall

“(A)n engaging and lively piece of scholarly exposition. Randall’s writing is fluent, the theological background is accessibly incorporated into the argument, and the succinct conclusion is compelling, uniting as it does a range of creatures . . . who [open] up new, vibrant ways of experiencing both this world and that beyond it.”

Coire Sois, The Cauldron of Knowledge
A Companion to Early Irish Saga
Tomás Ó Cathasaigh; Edited by Matthieu Boyd

“This book is a credit to its editor, publisher, and (above all) to its author, whose perceptive interpretations and civilized discussions lead the reader to an appreciation of the breadth of early Irish saga literature. It is a book that can and should be read by all those who seek insight into the literature and culture of medieval Ireland.”

From Beasts to Souls
Gender and Embodiment in Medieval Europe
Edited by E. Jane Burns and Peggy McCracken

“This superb, well-illustrated anthology well represents medieval cultural studies’ recent focus on animals and other nonhuman subjects. It attends chiefly to Middle English and French literature, with a welcome aside into medieval Christian doctrine. Its topics range from stones to mother’s milk, werewolves and lions, gendered souls, free-floating genitalia, and monstrous founding mothers, demonstrating the range of materials that become available to scholars once we cease to presume that humans are the only proper subject of our attention, or that the category of ‘the human’ is an already answered question.”

Writing at the Transition to Modernity
William Kuskin

“Recursive Origins tells a compelling story with a clear antagonist: the literary period. William Kuskin’s mighty ambition in this book is to ‘provide an alternative model for conceiving of literary history,’ resisting the totalizing temporal categories of modernity and the logic of revolution or rupture . . . that defines and legitimizes them.”

The Metaphors of Food in Medieval and Renaissance Italian Literature
Pina Palma

A Choice Outstanding Academic Title for 2013

 “[T]he reality of this beautiful book is that it analyzes food not only as nourishment but as reference and ‘tool’ used by culture and literature to teach, explain, and critique. Pina Palma’s book is an intriguing read that goes well beyond appearances and brings to light an intricate network of connections that a modern reader would definitely miss without the help of her accurate and well-balanced transversal reading.”

Sartorial Strategies
Outfitting Aristocrats and Fashioning Conduct in Late Medieval Literature
Nicole D. Smith

“Overall, this impressive study contributes both to medieval dress history and medieval literary scholarship. A wide variety of interdisciplinary sources were carefully employed to support Smith’s main conclusions, especially that the aristocratic readers of these texts would have been exposed to a positive reading of aristocratic dress instead of the negative interpretations found in contemporary clerical writings. . . . this book makes accessible the debate on aristocratic fashion and morality to specialists and nonspecialists alike.”

Visuality and Materiality in the Story of Tristan and Isolde
Edited by Jutta Eming, Ann Marie Rasmussen, and Kathryn Starkey

“This collection of twelve essays is both traditional and innovative in the ground it covers and the approaches taken by its editors and authors. . . . [It] is in many ways representative of the kind of contemporary medieval literary studies that are taking us beyond the merely textual into the broader spheres of cultural context. For that reason, among others, it is a welcome addition to scholarship.”

Tropologies
Ethics and Invention in England, c. 1350–1600
Ryan McDermott

“Tropologies: Ethics and Invention in England, c. 1350–1600 is a work of great and generous ambition, of intelligence both sharp and warm. It takes with equal seriousness the concerns of literary scholarship in our present and the concerns of biblical exegesis in the medieval and Reformation past, and shows how brightly they illuminate each other. At once irenic and challenging, this is a book that needs seriously to be reckoned with.”

Artisan Drama and Identity in Premodern England
Nicole R. Rice and Margaret Aziza Pappano

Winner of The David Bevington Award for Best New Book in Early Drama Studies for 2015, Medieval and Renaissance Drama Society

“Nicole R. Rice and Margaret Aziza Pappano present the most powerful argument to date about the ways that cycle plays allowed artisans to perform their changing socioeconomic identities in English towns over several centuries. Their impressive and detailed knowledge of the craft cultures of both towns supports a fascinating new comparison between York’s and Chester’s versions of biblical history.”

Unwritten Verities
The Making of England’s Vernacular Legal Culture, 1463–1549
Sebastian Sobecki

“In this book, [Sobecki] delivers the sum of a wide range of parts and convey the importance of those pieces to a community of scholars accustomed to looking past them. Chapter after chapter features fresh, robust claims that shed light on authors rarely considered by critics and are sure to shape the direction of future scholarship.”

Mysticism and Reform, 1400–1750
Edited by Sara S. Poor and Nigel Smith

“The essays collected here together, which originated with a conference on ‘Mysticism, Reform and the Formation of Modernity’ at Princeton University in 2008, represent extraordinary breadth within a trans-Atlantic scope. Both Catholic and Protestant post-Reformation mystical traditions are thus (re)covered.”

Writing Faith and Telling Tales
Literature, Politics, and Religion in the Work of Thomas More
Thomas Betteridge

“What Betteridge has given us is something remarkably different, something both analytical and speculative that can be thoughtful, inquiring, and at times provocative. It is nothing short of an anatomy of More’s mind that manages to incorporate both the spiritual and the secular as it reaches toward an inclusive poetics of acculturated faith.”

Transforming Work
Early Modern Pastoral and Late Medieval Poetry
Katherine C. Little

“In this rich, engaging new study Katherine C. Little revisits and reconceptualizes the relationship between medieval and early modern pastoral poetry through focusing on the literal and symbolic value of rural labor. . . . Little’s own labours in this book are to be commended. She has not only proposed a new framework for discussing medieval and early modern pastoral, but also presented a thesis about the genre’s ontology that will surely prompt further debate.”
—Modern Language Review

The English Martyr from Reformation to Revolution
Alice Dailey

“Scholars who work on medieval saints lives, cycle plays, counter-reformation polemic, and republican anti-royalist tracts will all find material immediately relevant to their work as well as claims that should spark further study.”

Miserere Mei
The Penitential Psalms in Late Medieval and Early Modern England
Clare Costley King’oo

“The Conference on Christianity and Literature 2012 Book of the Year Award

“King’oo ably demonstrates that the Penitential psalms form yet another example of the way in which ‘the religious literature of the pre-Reformed past was not cast aside but rather gradually and complexly reshaped in Reformation England.’”

This volume draws on a diversity of critical perspectives to reevaluate the Dante commentary tradition not as a monolithic entity but as one embodying, in the rich plurality of its exegetical practices, the perennial challenges and rewards of ‘interpreting Dante.’ . . . The book leaves us with a sense of the commentary tradition as an animate entity, which continues to evolve and grow into the body of Dante scholarship as we know it today, If ‘a text is also the history of its reception,’ then Interpreting Dante confirms that the Comedy continues to enjoy a prolific afterlife.”

Outsiders
The Humanity and Inhumanity of Giants in Medieval French Prose Romance
Sylvia Huot

“Giants emerge from Sylvia Huot’s scintillating new book as a ‘constitutive outside’ that is central to medieval European ideas of the self and of civilisation. Their presence enables Arthurian romance in particular implicitly to define norms for gender, race, ethics, and the human. Not least of this book’s merits is an ongoing and illuminating meditation on parallels between medieval ideologies of exclusion and modern discourses on race or indeed terrorism.”

John Marenbon

“[A]n excellent introduction to the study of Peter Abelard. The ‘four dimensions’ in the title refer to future, past, and present—Abelard’s and our own... In his conclusion, Marenbon reflects intelligently on how best to bring medieval thinkers into the contemporary discussion: not by distortion, forcing medieval ideas into ‘a conceptual framework where they do not belong,’ but by asking ourselves not only how they resemble modern positions, but also how the problems addressed differ from those today’s philosophers pose.”

The Life of Saint Katherine of Alexandria
John Capgrave
Translated by Karen A. Winstead

“Karen Winstead has been helping develop our appreciation of the genre of saints’ lives for some time now, so her discussion of how Capgrave’s Life fits into the tradition as well as how it breaks with convention is enlightening. . . . There is much to encourage further thought and exploration for both novice and experienced scholars.”

Beyond Reformation?
An Essay on William Langland’s Piers Plowman and the End of Constantinian Christianity
David Aers

“As a biblical scholar and historian of ancient Christianity, I knew next to nothing about Piers Plowman before reading David Aers’s completely accessible book, but I feel I have learned a huge amount from it. This magisterial and powerful exposition is certainly informative about a period of pre-Reformation English religious and political history not well known to many of us. But it is also timely for today. The book demonstrates how relevant Piers Plowman is, at least in Aers’s interpretation, for current epistemology, ecclesiology, politics, and religion.”

Shakespeare and Abraham
Ken Jackson

“For Ken Jackson, Shakespeare is not the secular, modern writer so many critics construct: he is a deeply religious thinker. . . . Jackson’s remarkable conclusion is that Shakespeare, like Kierkegaard and Derrida, points in the direction of a certain Abraham beyond Christianity and outside Western metaphysics.”

God’s Grace and Human Action
‘Merit’ in the Theology of Thomas Aquinas
Joseph P. Wawrykow

“In his scholarly study God’s Grace and Human Action, Joseph Wawrykow seeks to remedy the failures of his predecessors. Wawrykow is sensitive to Aquinas’s intellectual development and offers useful insight into the reasons Aquinas altered his views as he matured as a theologian. What emerges is a ‘big picture’ of Aquinas’s discussions of grace and merit, not just as independent treatises, but as contributions to a larger theological project.”

The Gospel according to Shakespeare
Piero Boitani

Translated by Vittorio Montemaggi and Rachel Jacoff

“In this wonderful, cultivated, even wise treatment of Shakespearean allusion to the Bible, Boitani retells the stories of six plays, commenting upon their gospel verbal echoes to show us a Shakespeare who, whatever his actual beliefs, casts his human actions with a divine, distinctly Christian light.”

Gregory the Great

Ascetic, Pastor, and First Man of Rome
George E. Demacopoulos

“Demacopoulos writes an important account of Gregory the Great (540–604), an important figure in Church history who was by turns theologian, pope, mystic, liturgical reformer, and benefactor. The author makes an argument for the deep intellectual and spiritual connections between two different aspects of Gregory: the theologian focused on asceticism and the shrewd administrator of the Church of Rome.”

The Harp of Prophecy
Early Christian Interpretation of the Psalms
Edited by Brian E. Daley, S.J., and Paul R. Kolbet

Christianity and Judaism in Antiquity

“Given the importance of the Psalms for the writers of the New Testament and in subsequent Christian thought and prayer, it is surprising that sustained scholarly attention to patristic interpretation of them has been so neglected. But the twelve scholarly essays that originated in a conference at the University of Notre Dame in 1998 and were then gathered into this volume compensate considerably for the delay.”

Debating Medieval Natural Law
A Survey
Riccardo Saccenti

“With exemplary scholarship, Riccardo Saccenti provides a clear and unbiased presentation of the evolution of natural law theory, practice, and interpretation from the Middle Ages to the present. His welcome and original work expands our understanding of how medieval natural law, and in particular how the relationship between natural rights and both the church and society, has been viewed by original authors and scholars. This is a valuable resource in its thorough and even-handed treatment of primary sources as well as its inclusion of the vast secondary literature.”

The Medieval Islamic Republic of Letters
Arabic Knowledge Construction
Muhsin J. al-Musawi

“The innovation of this study lies not in the choice of its topic—for many have addressed it—but in its robust examination of medieval themes and intellectual ventures, as it were, in conversation with modern and contemporary theories. The book is also pioneering and timely in transcending traditional single-author scholarship on classical and medieval Arabic, while avoiding both atomization and the traditional line-by-line analysis of the Arabic literary tradition. . . . The end result is the best study I have read of medieval Islamic belles lettres and the most cogent critique of ‘the ages of decline’ and Eurocentrism theses in a single blow.”

—Journal of the Society for Contemporary Thought and the Islamicate World

Setting Aside All Authority
Giovanni Battista Riccioli and the Science against Copernicus in the Age of Galileo
Christopher M. Graney

“The arguments of both Riccioli and Graney are complicated and subtle. Even so, I had little difficulty following them, thanks to Graney’s lucid prose and clear diagrams. If you think you know Riccioli, or if you want to know him better, pick up this book. Graney’s re-reading of the New Almagest is absolutely convincing, and Setting Aside All Authority is sure to become the standard text on the ‘science vs. science’ debate between Riccioli and the supporters of heliocentrism.”

From Knowledge to Beatitude
St. Victor, Twelfth-Century Scholars, and Beyond: Essays in Honor of Grover A. Zinn, Jr.
Edited by E. Ann Matter and Lesley Smith
“This is a wide-ranging and impressive collection of essays by a number of important scholars in the field of Victorine, twelfth century and early medieval thought. . . . The whole of the volume is a little like creation for Hugh of St. Victor, ‘a table heaped high with gifts.’ This collection, like Zinn’s own work of scholarship informed by joy and appreciation for the period, is set out as a table of delights.”

The Beguine, the Angel, and the Inquisitor
The Trials of Marguerite Porete and Guiard of Cressonessart
Sean L. Field
“Sean Field has produced the most important, scholarly and detailed study of the case; in terms of the technical details, chronology and historical context his book is the final word on the subject. . . . This is a fabulous piece of technical scholarship, and is absolutely required reading for anyone who works on Porete. It is also a very powerful case study for understanding the political context in which a prosecution for heresy is carried out, of great importance therefore for those working on inquisition, heresy and the sharp end of orthodoxy.”

What Is a Book?
The Study of Early Printed Books
Joseph A. Dane
“Dane turns to typography, illustrations, bindings, and other page-surface specific aspects of the book, which could have been written only by a person who had spent a lifetime examining books and investigating the methods for transferring ink to paper.”

European Transformations
The Long Twelfth Century
Edited by Thomas F. X. Noble and John Van Engen

“Noble and Van Engen have assembled a remarkably distinguished team of contributors and the quality of the eighteen chapters is uniformly high. Almost all should be at or pretty near the top of any introductory reading list on their topics, as well as providing succinct and stimulating updates for those already in the game, who will also find the exhaustive notes an invaluable bibliographical resource.”

Pope Innocent III (1160/61–1216)
To Root Up and to Plant
John C. Moore

“This book assesses Innocent’s personal attitudes as expressed both in his ecclesiological ideas and in his practical actions and describes events on the basis of a wide range of sources (papal letters, decrees and sermons). In addition Moore’s chronological approach establishes the actual framework within which Innocent built up his policy.”

Saint Louis
Jacques Le Goff
Translated by Gareth Evan Gollrad

“. . . a warm and largely admiring portrait of a king in whom power and goodness do indeed form two sides of the same coin. . . . Le Goff’s Louis is cheerful, ardent, devout, intelligent but unintellectual, skillful yet uncomplicated, a man in tune with his age but able to transcend at least some of its limitations. . . . [T]his is a rich and generous book, crammed with a lifetime’s learning.”

Gendering Disgust in Medieval Religious Polemic

Alexandra Cuffel

“Alexandra Cuffel engages in extraordinarily incisive analysis of a chronologically and linguistically breathtaking range of texts that explore the rhetoric of physical disgust in the polemic literature of Christians, Muslims, and Jews against one another. One cannot help but be impressed with the breadth of Cuffel’s analysis and by the manner in which her command of the sources in Latin, Hebrew, Arabic, and various vernaculars enables her to see both surfaces of the polemics at hand.”

Chosen among Women

Mary and Fatima in Medieval Christianity and Shi’ite Islam

Mary F. Thurlkill

“This is an interesting book, covering historical, political, media, cultural, and feminist aspects of Mary and Fatima. It shows that image-making in the concrete and abstract senses has long been a tool of those seeking to influence and control others.”
