Tolkien among the Moderns

Edited by Ralph C. Wood

“This well-written collection of essays makes an important contribution to Tolkien studies by extending Tom Shippey’s perception of Tolkien as a modern. Defined on the one hand by Tolkien’s relationship with Plato, Nietzsche, Levinas, and postmodernism, and on the other in relation to the novels of Cervantes, James Joyce, and Iris Murdoch, Tolkien among the Moderns repositions The Hobbit, The Lord of the Rings, and The Silmarillion to explore important moral, ethical, aesthetic, and theological issues.”

Simone Weil

Late Philosophical Writings

Simone Weil

Edited and with an introduction by Eric O. Springsted
Translated by Eric O. Springsted and Lawrence E. Schmidt

“Springsted edits this collection of Simone Weil’s works on her conception of philosophy, consisting of a short introduction and ten translated essays. . . . Though unpolished, these pieces offer substantive analysis and insight into key topics in philosophy, such as the nature of the discipline, value, personal identity, character, and morality. . . . An excellent resource for philosophers interested in metaphilosophy, metaethics, and free will.”

Simone Weil
Attention to the Real
Robert Chenavier
Translated by Bernard E. Doering
“Bernard Doering’s translation of Robert Chenavier’s Simone Weil: Attention to the Real makes this unusually concise and authoritative introduction to the thought of Simone Weil available in English . . . this brief essay, which is the fruit of a rigorous and sustained engagement with Weil’s work, provides a dense and coherent introduction to Weil’s philosophy, and manages to unify the diverse strands that make up this unique intellectual trajectory.”

Forms of Truth and the Unity of Knowledge
Edited by Vittorio Hösle
“This outstanding collection brings together first-rate scholars, hailing from disciplines as varied as mathematics, biology, chemistry, architecture, literary studies, engineering, and theology, and invites them to reflect on the specific truth experience of their branch of knowledge. By doing justice to the diversity of this experience and at the same time to the unity of the quest for truth, this volume stupendously renews the classical idea of the unity of knowledge, indeed the beautiful metaphor of the tree of knowledge.”

The Many Faces of Beauty
Edited by Vittorio Hösle
“In 2012, the Notre Dame Institute for Advanced Study (NDIAS) sponsored “The Many Faces of Beauty” conference, which offered a deep dive into the debate on beauty and aesthetic theory. This collection of 16 essays from prominent artists, scientists, mathematicians and critics features three Notre Dame scholars: The Huisking Professor of Theology Cyril O’Regan, the Rev. Joyce Professor of German Language and Literature Mark Roche, and J. Dudley Andrew ’67.”

Adventures in Philosophy at Notre Dame
Kenneth M. Sayre

“Kenneth Sayre tells the story of the transitions of the philosophy department at Notre Dame with a keen eye for how they illumine transitions in the developments in philosophy, broadly speaking. I think the great achievement of this book is not only its well-crafted history of the Notre Dame philosophy department but also its reminder to us that philosophers are human beings. By bringing to life the extraordinary people who have been associated with the Notre Dame philosophy department, Sayre has written a book that is deeply humane and uplifting.”

Nietzsche and the Drama of Historiobiography

Roberto Alejandro

“In Nietzsche and the Drama of Historiobiography, Roberto Alejandro challenges this tradition and attempts to redefine the meaning of Nietzsche’s entire corpus, offering an interpretation that integrates man and work, and highlights parallel tensions in both. His book offers a fresh and thoughtful reconsideration of Nietzsche’s lifelong project. . . . Ultimately, this book records a unified vision of Nietzsche’s work that is stimulating, fresh, and valuable.”

Minding the Modern
Human Agency, Intellectual Traditions, and Responsible Knowledge
Thomas Pfau

“[L]ike Charles Taylor (A Secular Age) and Brad Gregory (The Unintended Reformation), Pfau is a man equipped for the enormous cartographic task of remapping the rise of modernity. . . . Minding the Modern is not history, nor is Pfau a historian. Instead, it is an extended, historically grounded close reading of texts that an accomplished literature professor is well equipped to provide. . . . Pfau focuses his wide-ranging account by choosing the (admittedly enormous) category of human personhood, and its corollaries of will and agency, as the vehicle in which he takes his tour of the ages. His express aim is ‘to capture the intrinsic idea of will and person through a series of forensic readings of representative arguments.’”

The Quest of the Absolute
Birth and Decline of European Romanticism
Louis Dupré

“[T]his valuable book is an introduction of great scholarly rigour, and it is therefore much more than a textbook or introduction. It should be used in any upper level course on modernity and Romantic literature and is able to shed light on the various cultural streams within the movement (German, English, and French). As the concluding volume of a trilogy, The Quest of the Absolute should be read in tandem with the first two installments, and all three together constitute an illuminating picture of the evolution of modernity before the twentieth century.”

Abelard in Four Dimensions

A Twelfth-Century Philosopher in His Context and Ours

John Marenbon

The Conway Lectures in Medieval Studies

“Abelard in Four Dimensions is an excellent introduction to the study of Peter Abelard. The ‘four dimensions’ in the title refer to future, past, and present—Abelard’s and our own. . . . In his conclusion, Marenbon reflects intelligently on how best to bring medieval thinkers into the contemporary discussion: not by distortion, forcing medieval ideas into ‘a conceptual framework where they do not belong,’ but by asking ourselves not only how they resemble modern positions, but also how the problems addressed differ from those today’s philosophers pose.”

A Defense of Dignity
Creating Life, Destroying Life, and Protecting the Rights of Conscience
Christopher Kaczor

“A Defense of Dignity, brings together previously published essays on a range of issues in medical ethics . . . . Kaczor focuses principally on particular issues in bioethics in which human beings are vulnerable. He discusses procreative beneficence, embryo adoption, ectopic pregnancy, fetal surgery, physician-assisted suicide, patients in a persistent vegetative state, and organ donation. Kaczor’s argument on behalf of human dignity—forwarded in the introductory chapter and then elaborated through his interventions on these particular controversial medical issues—provides a strong example of a common claim that human worth is intrinsic.”

The Anticipatory Corpse
Medicine, Power, and the Care of the Dying
Jeffrey P. Bishop

“The Anticipatory Corpse has the potential to become a classic in the field of medicine. . . . Politics of the Person as the Politics of Being
David Walsh

“Politics of the Person as the Politics of Being is a brilliant, eloquent, and luminous meditative study, filled necessarily with paradox, owing to the limitations of analysis and of language, of which Walsh is fully cognizant, on the meaning of the person. What Happened in and to Moral Philosophy in the Twentieth Century?
Philosophical Essays in Honor of Alasdair MacIntyre
Edited by Fran O’Rourke

“This collection of essays in honor of Alasdair MacIntyre provides the means to engage with century-long theories of moral philosophy in a positive and interesting way. And, more importantly, it allows the reader to be a part of a debate between ethical theories that are usually presented as completely different and incapable of arguing with one another.”

Essays in Honor of Catherine Zuckert and Michael Zuckert
Edited by Ann Ward and Lee Ward

“Overall, the essays collected here are both thought-provoking and address important questions (not to mention being pieces of scholarship that are enjoyable to read). Therefore, this volume will be useful to scholars and graduate students working on such authors and topics or themes. Consequently, and given the volume’s potential life span, it will point future scholars to the Zuckerts and their scholarship, thus keeping both their memories and scholarship alive for future generations.”

Reason, Tradition, and the Good
MacIntyre’s Tradition-Constituted Reason and Frankfurt School Critical Theory
Jeffery L. Nicholas

“In this impressive and ambitious book Jeffery Nicholas argues that modernity is ‘infected’ by a conception of reason that has been stripped of its ability to raise ethical questions and to discuss important moral issues. . . . For Nicholas, the trouble is not simply that we refuse to examine the policies and positions of our own society or of other cultures. It is rather that even when we do engage in evaluation and critique, our critiques inevitably come up short.”

Rawlsian Political Analysis
Rethinking the Microfoundations of Social Science
Paul Clements

“There have been few applications of Rawls in the real world, yet Clements admirably exemplifies his methodological claim in three chapters discussing the Grameen bank in Bangladesh, the (sorry) state of Bihar in India and the politics of climate change. . . . Clements’ book is a welcome and thoughtful addition to the debate on how to analyse social agency. . . . this thought-provoking book will undoubtedly spark lively discussions in postgraduate politics seminars.”

Cicero’s Practical Philosophy
Edited by Walter Nicgorski
“The volume . . . should appeal to anyone who is interested in Cicero’s philosophical writings (and perhaps to some who are interested primarily in Cicero as an orator and statesman). Courage
The Politics of Life and Limb
Richard Avramenko
Bronze Winner in Foreword Magazine’s 2011 “Book of the Year Awards” in Political Science
“This is a valuable book that can be read not just by social scientists, but ethicists, and indeed, any scholar interested in society and the political. Indeed, Avramenko ends by making a good case for courage as a social scientific virtue, pushing scholars to see the care and legitimate courage at work in honor cultures that are still present in our politics. Only then might we be able to dig deeper and see a sense of value that we missed in those we fear.”

Christian Philosopher of State and Civil Society

“Chaplin has written a masterful book. He has partaken deeply of a profoundly Christian theorist, and the fruit of his reflection is an incisive text written in a palatable idiom that is (largely) free of the original Dutch Reformed dialect and convoluted linguistic inventions. More importantly, it is a rare author who can, in one book, introduce and summarise the work of a great thinker, critically assess the value of that thinking, and then utilize it in fashioning his own constructive proposal—and do all that in a clear and engaging manner.”

Hans Urs von Balthasar and the Critical Appropriation of Russian Religious Thought

Jennifer Newsome Martin

“With Hans Urs von Balthasar and the Critical Appropriation of Russian Religious Thought, Jennifer Newsome Martin has produced an accomplished, literate, and original contribution that is much needed in Balthasar scholarship. To my knowledge, this is the only text on Balthasar and three important Russian Orthodox thinkers—Soloviev, Berdyaev, and Bulgakov—who engaged ancient Christianity with modern philosophical currents. Additionally, Martin brings to light aspects of Balthasar’s theological method that go beyond Balthasar’s own importance to broader issues in theology.”

Thinking Prayer

Theology and Spirituality amid the Crises of Modernity

Andrew Prevot

“This ambitious and ultimately successful book will fundamentally change how theologians understand prayer. Prevot handles the most complex philosophical and theological figures with skill, from Heidegger to Balthasar, from Cone to Marion. Writing about prayer tends to be fluffy or dismissive, but Prevot manages to be both rigorous and graceful. As the title advertises, this book brings together thought and prayer—lucidly, powerfully, and elegantly. It is a must-read for all theologians thinking and praying today.”

Theo-Poetics
Hans Urs von Balthasar and the Risk of Art and Being
Anne M. Carpenter

Foreword by Peter J. Casarella

“This is a beautifully written work engaging von Balthasar’s attempt to wed aesthetics back into the essence of theology. Carpenter presents a sophisticated and creative study of the importance of the aesthetics of the written word in order to reveal the importance of von Balthasar’s project but also to advance it. The work presents a clear overview of the heart of von Balthasar’s work, but also a fresh application of it through an analysis of poetry. The book provides a rich source for contemplating the eternal Word, God’s most creative act of poetry uttered eternally.”

Life in the Spirit
Trinitarian Grammar and Pneumatic Community in Hegel and Augustine
Douglas Finn

“Life in the Spirit is a timely work filling a real need in contemporary theological and philosophical thought. Douglas Finn shows that Augustine’s Trinitarian theology is one fully engaged with God’s work in history. It will completely reorient discussions on the Trinity in Christian theology and help to engage that discussion with contemporary continental philosophy.”

The Contemplative Self after Michel Henry
A Phenomenological Theology
Joseph Rivera

“English-language scholarship on Michel Henry is growing rapidly but still nascent. Joseph Rivera’s book is well positioned to be one of the early classics in the field; it does not merely introduce Henry but builds on what comparatively little has been written about his work. Rivera uses his introduction to Henry’s thinking as a platform for his own truly critical and constructive project.”

Joseph Stephen O’Leary

“Conventional and Ultimate Truth by the well-known professor Joseph O’Leary is a major contribution to contemporary Christian fundamental theology. Christianity and Secular Reason
Classical Themes and Modern Developments
Edited by Jeffrey Bloechl

“This book presents as broad a representation of the hermeneutic and phenomenological methods as applied to Christianity and secular reason as one might find. As such, it is an excellent sourcebook for and would undoubtedly be of interest to scholars and advanced students working in that field. Those of a more analytic temperament may also wish to consult these essays with a view toward establishing a productive dialogue about themes of mutual interest and importance.”

Authenticity as Self-Transcendence
The Enduring Insights of Bernard Lonergan
Michael H. McCarthy

2016 Illumination Book Award, Bronze winner in Theology

“Michael McCarthy’s book is a masterpiece of cultural synthesis and interpretation. I know of no other recent books on the same or similar topic to which Authenticity as Self-Transcendence can be compared. It is definitely unique. It will interest students and teachers of modern philosophy, theology, and history. It will be a fine classroom text, especially in courses on history and culture, politics, and religion, as well as specifically Catholic thought.”

Christian Philosophy of Religion
Essays in Honor of Stephen T. Davis
Edited by C. P. Ruloff

“Very few philosophers have had the impact of Stephen Davis on the world of Christian philosophy. It is only fitting, then, that a book honoring him should contain essays by the very best philosophers of religion writing on topics that Professor Davis has written on so ably. Among the standouts are new essays from Brian Leftow on Christology, William Hasker on the Trinity, and Linda Zagzebski on faith. And perhaps most appropriate of all is a paper from Davis’s mentor, the late John Hick, in which the latter writes on the former’s work on the resurrection. This is a terrific collection that I highly recommend for anyone interested in philosophical theology.”

Ten Philosophical Essays in the Christian Tradition
Frederick J. Crosson
Edited by Michael J. Crowe and Nicholas Ayo, C.S.C.
Tribute by Mary Katherine Tillman
Introduction by Mark Moes

“Frederick Crosson may be considered one of the most learned Catholic philosophers of his generation. An ever careful scholar, from the perspective of classical philosophy and, one may say, its medieval continuation, he has addressed some of the most pressing social and political issues of our day. Few possess his command of ancient and relevant modern texts in discussions of religion and its role in society. The depth of that learning is particularly evident in his review and assessment of Catholic social teaching since Leo XIII.”

A Philosophy of the Unsayable
William Franke

“William Franke has emerged as our foremost purveyor of what cannot be said. . . . We should be grateful for this extended articulation, since it also informs us why the unsayable must be said. . . . Given its breadth—the range of thinkers and thought that is covered—and its challenge—to keep open ‘conscious human reflection that refuses to be cut off from the mystery of its ground’—this is a remarkable text, and deserves close attention at every level.”

René Girard and Secular Modernity
Christ, Culture, and Crisis
Scott Cowdell

“More than any other study devoted to Girard, Cowdell incorporates Girard’s more recent writings and interviews into a total picture of mimetic theory and brings it into conversation with modern secularism. . . . Cowdell’s book deserves a place among the pantheon of works that show the importance of mimetic theory for Christian theology.”

The Fullness of Being
A New Paradigm for Existence

The Golden Cord
A Short Book on the Secular and the Sacred
Charles Taliaferro

“A CHOICE Outstanding Academic Title for 2013

“In this highly eclectic, personal, and engaging work, Charles Taliaferro argues why even ‘gravity is a manifestation of God’s love’ . . . For Taliaferro, there are various cords in life that can lead us to God. To reach such a destination, he takes the reader along a journey whose terrain is steeped in literary metaphors, philosophical contours (and obstacles), and autobiographical insights and depictions.”

The Persistence of the Sacred in Modern Thought
Edited by Chris L. Firestone and Nathan A. Jacobs

A CHOICE Outstanding Academic Title for 2013

“Certainly. . . the authors of The Persistence of the Sacred in Modern Thought make a useful and original contribution by correcting willful or innocent misunderstandings of the role of God in modern philosophy and by pointing to the need for contemporary scholars to be more aware of their own historical and cultural presuppositions in approaching texts from the past.”

Transcendent Love

Dostoevsky and the Search for a Global Ethic

Leonard G. Friesen

“This study makes a sustained and elegant attempt to embed Dostoevsky and his work in the central twenty-first century concern of how ethical systems might be accommodated in an era of globalization. Leonard Friesen’s argument that a trustworthy global ethic emerges from Dostoevsky’s writings, one centred on the primacy of love as embodied in the figure of Christ, is a familiar one. But the road he follows in making that argument is enriched by deep personal conviction and fresh insights into Dostoevsky and our own ethical assumptions. No doubt some will take issue with both his approach and his conclusions, but all will be challenged by them.”

A Framework for the Good

Kevin Kinghorn

“Philosophy in the analytic tradition has long needed a phenomenology for ethics. This book meets the need with an original framework for ethics that aims to be Christian. Contending that only pleasurable mental states have intrinsic value, Kevin Kinghorn advocates for objectivity in matters of goodness and badness but not in matters of rightness and wrongness. He makes illuminating use of the ideas of ‘feeling tones’ and ‘feeling connected to others’ to elaborate his phenomenology for ethical relationships. The result is a novel and clarifying treatment of foundational ethical issues with special attention to Christian ethics. Overall, this is a very important contribution to the field of philosophical ethics.”

Complicity and Moral Accountability

Gregory Mellema

“This book provides a clear, careful account of the various ways humans can be complicit in and therefore morally accountable for actions that they contribute to even though others may be the principal agents. Although the book is grounded in the account of complicity given by Thomas Aquinas, it also engages contemporary literature on the subject and finishes with an account of the ways this moral concept intersects with American legal principles. The book can be read with profit by philosophers and nonphilosophers alike, and it sheds new light on such notions as collective responsibility and guilt. This is a first-rate contribution to contemporary moral philosophy.”

An Essay in Christian Sexual Ethics
Alexander R. Pruss

Notre Dame Studies in Ethics and Culture

“With great clarity and without recourse to religious argument, Pruss gives the reader an extensive philosophical reflection on love and sexuality. . . . The author examines reproductive technology and concludes that it is only morally permissible when helping coition to be fruitful, so that the child always remains a fruit of the marital act. Pruss has presented us with a substantial apologia on Catholic teaching on human sexuality.”

Simone Weil and the Specter of Self-Perpetuating Force

E. Jane Doering

“Simone Weil’s earliest published essays from the 1930s advocate an uncompromising pacifism she gradually abandoned in the aftermath of Hitler’s invasion of Czechoslovakia. E. Darwin in the Twenty-First Century
Nature, Humanity, and God
Edited by Phillip R. Sloan, Gerald McKenny, and Kathleen Eggleson

Studies in Science and the Humanities from the Reilly Center for Science, Technology, and Values

“This volume presents the best scholarship available on the present and future developments in evolutionary science and its implications for the humanities. It will reward careful study by evolutionary biologists and social scientists, but also philosophers and theologians—or indeed, by any reflective person seeking to be informed about up-to-date analysis of its three main topics: Nature, Humanity, and God. The editors of this volume are to be congratulated for producing a volume that makes available a rich array of voices from a variety of disciplines and schools of thought. It is a must read for anyone who wishes to be informed about the interpretation of Darwin in the twenty-first century.”

Setting Aside All Authority
Giovanni Battista Riccioli and the Science against Copernicus in the Age of Galileo

If you think you know Riccioli, or if you want to know him better, pick up this book. Graney’s re-reading of the New Almagest is absolutely convincing, and Setting Aside All Authority is sure to become the standard text on the ‘science vs. science’ debate between Riccioli and the supporters of heliocentrism.”
