Freedom from Reality
The Diabolical Character of Modern Liberty
D. C. Schindler

“Schindler’s book is a brilliant tour de force of political and moral reasoning. . . . A most timely and stringent analysis of modernity's confused and calamitous dissociation of freedom and the good, Schindler’s book will be ranked with similarly intentioned, highly influential works by Polanyi, MacIntyre, and Gadamer.”

Disarming Beauty
Essays on Faith, Truth, and Freedom
Julián Carrón

“Carrón’s argument deserves careful consideration by Christians attracted to the Benedict Option. . . . in sharp contrast to Dreher, Carrón does not think Christians should disown contemporary society as a new ‘Dark Age.’ . . . Over and over again, Carrón seems to ask: If Christianity is true, what do Christians really have to fear?”

Abducted in Iraq
A Priest in Baghdad
Saad Sirop Hanna, with Edward S. Aris
Foreword by David Alton

“Bishop Hanna’s story is one of self-discovery, deepening faith, and an eye-opening reality to the plight of numerous Christians in the Middle East. . . . the situation of these Christians is often ignored and marginalized for political reasons. We are attesting to the potential end of one of the most ancient populations and religious traditions in the world.”

Moses the Egyptian in the Illustrated Old English Hexateuch (London, British Library Cotton MS Claudius B.iv)

Herbert R. Broderick

Herbert R. Broderick presents a compelling thesis that these motifs, in particular the image of the horned Moses, have a Hellenistic Egyptian origin. He argues that the visual construct of Moses in the Old English Hexateuch may have been based on a Late Antique, no longer extant, prototype influenced by works of Hellenistic Egyptian Jewish exegetes, who ascribed to Moses the characteristics of an Egyptian-Hellenistic king, military commander, priest, prophet, and scribe.

Creation ex nihilo
Origins, Development, Contemporary Challenges
Edited by Gary A. Anderson and Markus Bockmuehl

“At least since the late second century, the doctrine of creation out of nothing has been the default position of the church. Largely undisputed, it has not always received the critical attention it merits. Now, through this wide-ranging set of essays from Jewish and Christian scholars, we learn of the richness of the classical notion as it has been developed in different contexts.”

Work of Love
A Theological Reconstruction of the Communion of Saints
Leonard J. DeLorenzo

“For Protestant readers, Work of Love is . . . a chance to experience the doctrine of the communion of saints in its Catholic fullness, to see how the veneration of one’s forebears in the faith might attest to and not distract from a robust belief in Christ’s Godhood. Most of all, though, the book is a work of love because it teaches us how to think about our own dead—that ever-lengthening mental list of people who, in their friendship or antagonism or both, give us bits of ourselves, then leave.”

“Fifty years after the Second Vatican Council, this is a welcome opportunity to reflect on that Council’s teaching on Mary as central to the Church. The Spirit, the Affections, and the Christian Tradition
Edited by Dale M. Coulter and Amos Yong

“This book is a collection of essays concerning the role and understanding of emotion throughout the history of Christian thought. These essays were contributed by academics representing a variety of disciplines, including historians, philosophers, and biblical scholars. Each chapter focuses upon a different historical era or historical figure, ranging from the first century with Saint Paul to Jonathan Edwards in the eighteenth century. . . . In recent years, academia has begun to recover the role and value of the emotions, and this book fills a lacuna concerning the affections in Christian thought.”

Mary’s Bodily Assumption
Matthew Levering
2015 CATHOLIC PRESS ASSOCIATION BOOK AWARD, FIRST PLACE IN THEOLOGY

“Levering . . . has written a beautiful book which takes into account the two demurring sources about Mary’s assumption. Levering argues clearly and convincingly that belief in Mary’s assumption, body, and soul into heaven rests on three ‘scriptural pillars.’ . . . Her destiny prefigures the destiny of all who believe in her son. The author obviously would think it was impoverishing not to have this belief as part of one’s faith.”

William Desmond and Contemporary Theology

Rethinking the Medieval Legacy for Contemporary Theology
Edited by Anselm K. Min

“Taken as a whole, the essays present a view of the richness of the medieval tradition, proving in their application to such diverse modern issues as organ transplantation and the Heideggerian description of Dasein that medieval authors still offer valuable insights for reflection today. . . . The fruitful ways in which the essays illumine contemporary questions by their retrieval of the medieval legacy should provide reason for a reappraisal of that tradition’s relevance today. In that, the collection serves an admirable purpose, while the essays themselves present scholarship of high quality.”

Gregory the Great
Ascetic, Pastor, and First Man of Rome
George E. Demacopoulos

2016 CATHOLIC PRESS ASSOCIATION BOOK AWARD, HONORABLE MENTION HISTORY

“One puts this book down thinking about its subject in a new way, for Demacopoulos has been able to use the structure of Gregory’s thought to make sense of its author. Softening as he does the caesura of Gregory’s exchanging secular for religious life, Demacopoulos allows us to see his life as having been less disjointed than it has hitherto seemed to be, for the skills he had exercised in his early days as prefect of the city would be useful when he became pope.”

What Is Ethically Demanded?
K. E. Løgstrup’s Philosophy of Moral Life
Edited by Hans Fink and Robert Stern
“This book introduces Løgstrup’s central idea of ‘the ethical demand’ and probes various aspects of how it should best be understood and its significance for ethics. While some recent work has explored the relation between The Ethical Demand and some of Løgstrup’s later work, especially on the ‘sovereign expressions of life,’ one thing that is interesting about this collection is that while “it further advances those discussions, it also traces elements of Løgstrup’s thought back to his earlier work—chiefly, but not only, through the inclusion of a translation of his relatively early essay ‘The Anthropology of Kant’s Ethics.’”

Apocalypse Deferred
Girard and Japan
Edited by Jeremiah L. Alberg

“This is the first major interdisciplinary response to Girard’s apocalyptic-themed late work Achever Clausewitz. The Japanese cultural material explored here not only reveals evidence for aspects of the mimetic theory from folk history, literature, theatre, and popular culture (e.g., anime), but from a non-Western nation it raises the question of necessary Judeo-Christian input into the revealing of scapegoating dynamics.”

Trinitarian Grammar and Pneumatic Community in Hegel and Augustine
Douglas Finn
Thresholds in Philosophy and Theology
“In his excellent new book Life in the Spirit, Douglas Finn of Boston College compares Hegel and Augustine on much more than just the topics of love and reason. With pneumatology as his key concern, and all of Hegel and Augustine’s works before him, Finn does more than just provide a comparison of contrasting views—although this is a strong part of the book. Reading Augustine’s sermons and commentaries as well as his more widely known works, Finn describes the shared concern for the spoken logos in the christologies of Hegel and Augustine, while emphasizing their differences.”

Thresholds in Philosophy and Theology

“This third volume of O’Leary's trilogy on fundamental theology is a work in comparative theology, engaging key dialogue partners in articulating a distinctive phenomenology of religion. He believes that talk of the ultimacy of emptiness does not produce negative theology but sends one back to the fabric of conventional discourse to enable breakthroughs of ultimacy.”

Herman Dooyeweerd
Christian Philosopher of State and Civil Society
Jonathan Chaplin

WINNER OF THE 2016 HERMAN DOOYEWEERD PRIZE FROM THE ASSOCIATION FOR REFORMATIONAL PHILOSOPHY

“To unpack Dooyeweerd is no small task, especially given his penchant for neologisms and a highly nuanced use of common vernacular. Given the challenge of such an undertaking, one can appreciate Chaplin’s cumulative exposition of Dooyeweerd’s thought; his skillful development provides an effortless transition from Chaplin’s unique philosophy to his distinct political and social thought to the application of both in contemporary issues.”

Catholicism and American Borders in the Gothic Literary Imagination

Farrell O’Gorman

“This study is the first to explore in detail the importance of Catholicism to American Gothic. As the examples of Faulkner and Melville show, the Catholic shadow in American literature can be found in works by Protestant or secular writers. O’Gorman of course includes expected Catholic writers who are engaged with the traditions of their faith, such as Flannery O’Connor and the convert Walker Percy; but there are other writers whose Catholicism has seldom been considered relevant: J. Hector St. John de Crèvecoeur, Kate Chopin, and Toni Morrison, among others. In every case O’Gorman’s nuanced readings provide unexpected insights.”

Milton and Catholicism

Edited by Ronald Corthell and Thomas N. Corns

“This book is to be warmly welcomed as the first full-scale investigation of Milton’s engagements with Catholicism. It examines his fierce Protestant anti-Catholic sentiment, as well as his admiration for the culture and intellectual life of Catholic Italy.”

Uses and Abuses of Moses
Literary Representations since the Enlightenment
Theodore Ziolkowski

“On a micro-level, [Ziolkowski] analyzes many individual works, demonstrating the ways in which the figure and story of Moses were appropriated during the 19th and 20th centuries; on the macro-level, Ziolkowski performs his analysis with an eye for the larger contextual issues that explain how and why the thematic undercurrents of these appropriations change from one generation to the next. To date, there has yet to be published a more holistic study of the character and story of Moses, without the usual forms of use and abuse Ziolkowski so thoroughly illustrates.”

Shakespeare and Religion
Early Modern and Postmodern Perspectives
Edited by Ken Jackson and Arthur F. Marotti

“Any scholar interested in Shakespeare, or religion, or both will find an essay or ten to pique her interest in this collection. The most engrossing moments in the collection occur when, as in transubstantiation, the historical, material aspects meet spiritual, theological matters and when we can see both strands of thought functioning dialectically.”

THE YUSKO WARD-PHILLIPS LECTURES IN ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

“This is one of the finest exercises in literature and theology that I have encountered for a long time. Its challenge to the reader lies in its profound grasp of theology and its philosophical implications, while at the same time pursuing complex literary discussions of the nature of writing and narrative after Roland Barthes’ Writing Degree Zero.”

Orthodox Christian Perspectives on War
Edited by Perry T. Hamalis and Valerie A. Karras

“Orthodox Christian thought on the phenomenon of war remains largely unknown in the West, an imbalance that this path-breaking volume successfully amends. These twelve essays grapple with biblical, patristic, historical, and theological sources, presenting critical insights through a diverse range of perspectives and methodologies.”

Icons and the Liturgy, East and West
History, Theology, and Culture
Edited by Nicholas Denysenko

“This collection of essays exploring icons East and West, their history, theology, and culture, has no equal in print. It is riveting, surprising, exciting, and as beautiful as the sacred images the authors take up, from Taft, Lucas, Pentcheva, and Noreen to Maranci, Llywelyn, Courey, and Chirovsky. A major contribution from Nicholas Denysenko and the Huffington Ecumenical Institute at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles.”

Theology and Form
Contemporary Orthodox Architecture in America
Nicholas Denysenko

“This book makes a unique contribution to its field. It is broadly and intentionally cross-disciplinary in its character, embracing architecture, liturgical theology, aesthetics, sociology, and oral history. In this way it manages to give an especially detailed portrait of Orthodoxy in America that has no precedent.”

Eastern Orthodox Christianity and American Higher Education
Theological, Historical, and Contemporary Reflections
Edited by Ann Mitsakos Bezzerides and Elizabeth H. Prodromou

“In the last two to three decades, only a small handful of more-or-less dated books on Orthodox perspectives toward higher education have been published, in contrast to the plethora of works on the topic by Roman Catholics, Reformed, Lutheran, Baptist, Evangelical, Wesleyan, and various Protestant authors. Thus, the arrival of this book is long overdue.”

The Moscow Council (1917–1918)
The Creation of the Conciliar Institutions of the Russian Orthodox Church
Hyacinthe Destivelle, O.P.
Edited by Michael Plekon and Vitaly Permiakov
Translated by Jerry Ryan

“This publication of this important work in English is an event of great significance. The book will serve as an indispensable handbook for historians, students of history and religion, and certainly also clerics and theologians wishing to acquaint themselves with the basics of a foundational even in the history of the modern Christian churches.”

The Way
Religious Thinkers of the Russian Emigration in Paris and Their Journal, 1925–1940
Antoine Arjakovsky
Translated by Jerry Ryan
Edited by John A. Jillions and Michael Plekon
Foreword by Rowan Williams

“The Way, Antoine Arjakovsky’s magisterial study of the Russian emigration of the interwar period, published in French over a decade ago and already translated into Russian, is now available to the English-speaking world thanks to a new translation by Jerry Ryan. This is a work of major importance.”

Beyond the Inquisition
Ambrogio Catarino Politi and the Origins of the Counter-Reformation
Giorgio Caravale
Translated by Donald Weinstein
“This is now the definitive study, an expansion and revision of the 2007 Italian monograph, of a figure, Lancellotto Politi, known religiously as Ambrogio Catarino, who played an important role in the theological struggles of the Catholic Church in the sixteenth century. Always considered one of the great Roman controversialist writers against Lutheran currents, the present work shows him in the thick of internal debates within his own Dominican Order, the Council of Trent, and over the enduring Savonarolan legacy, among other issues that agitated papal Rome at the time.”

Suspicious Moderate
The Life and Writings of Francis à Sancta Clara (1598–1680)
Anne Ashley Davenport
“Christopher Davenport, or Sancta Clara, is a figure who has slipped to the margins of many treatments of English Catholicism. This book does an excellent job in making the case for his recovery. Suspicious Moderate: The Life and Writings of Francis à Sancta Clara (1598–1680) is a significant and worthwhile contribution to the historiographies of English Catholicism, the politics of seventeenth-century England, and early modern philosophy and natural science.”

Antoine Frédéric Ozanam
Raymond L. Sickinger

“Thanks to Sickinger’s faithfulness to his authentic subject—which is to say, the man himself, not the image of the man—this book is sure to become the definitive biography of Ozanam for decades, if not longer. . . . Ozanam is a relatively unknown but important, even pivotal, figure in the Church’s recent history. Whether you are a Vincentian, Catholic Worker, both, or neither, I can’t think of a better introduction to the inspiring life and enduring legacy of Antoine Frédéric Ozanam.”

The Shamrock and the Cross
Irish American Novelists Shape American Catholicism
Eileen P. Sullivan

2017 CATHOLIC PRESS ASSOCIATION BOOK AWARD, FIRST PLACE IN IMMIGRATION

“Sullivan has produced a fascinating work exploring how fictionalized accounts of Irish American Catholicism shaped the growth and role of the church in American society in the nineteenth century. . . . The work addresses a neglected area of Irish and American Catholic studies and on that ground alone deserves a wide audience.”
